DETAILED ACTION

Claim Objections

1. Claim 8 is objected to under 37 CFR 1.75(c). Claim 8 contains the same exact combination of elements per claim 3. Accordingly, claim 8 has been withdrawn from further consideration.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1, 2, 5, and 9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Keough 5,042,667 in view of Rosenbaum et al. 5,249,687.

Keough '667 discloses a sequential mail sorting system for generating sort sequence codes for all mail pieces per claimed invention. The system reads a sort plan text file for a selected postal delivery zone, selects the carriers whose routes are located in such zone (figures 4 and 7), and determines the number of sort bins 101-120 available for the sorting system. The system also generates sort sequence codes for all of the mail pieces (holdouts and regular mails) for sequential sorting order. The sort sequence codes uses hash marks and look up table for zip code matching (figure 2b). However, Keough is silent as to the specific of placing the codes into a binary file.

Rosenbaum '687 discloses a sorting system for scanned mail. Rosenbaum teaches the usage of binary file for machine-readability purposes.

It would have been obvious for a person with ordinary skill in the art, at the time the invention was made, to have put Keough's sequence codes into binary file so that the sorting machine can read said codes, as taught by Rosenbaum.

Response to Arguments

4. Applicant's arguments filed on July 22, 2003 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant argued that Keough '667 does not provide sort sequence codes for "holdout" mail types. This is not persuasive because Keough '667 provides sort sequence codes for all types of mail pieces, including holdout types. Keough '667 provides sort sequence corresponding to a mail carrier's route. If said carrier route does not operate everyday, the mail sorted for said route is considered to be holdout type.

Allowable Subject Matter

5. Claim 3 is allowable over the prior art of record.
6. Claims 4, 6, and, 7 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Conclusion

7. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

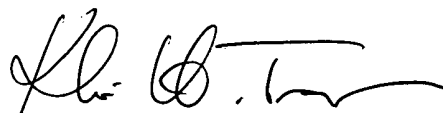

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
